

SOLDIER MURDERS COMRADE IN ARMS

Saloon Near Fort Washington
Scene of the Tragedy

Private Wineberger Shoots
Down Private Gosney
During Quarrel.

Murderer Gets Away But
Later Surrenders to Fort Officers.

Sheriff James A. Sweeney, of Prince George county, Md., went to Fort Washington, on the lower Potomac, today to take Private William S. Wineberger into custody on a charge of murder. A coroner's jury yesterday held Wineberger responsible for the death of Private Frederick A. Gosney, whom he is alleged to have shot during a brawl in a saloon near Fort Washington Saturday night.

Wineberger will be taken to Marlboro, the county seat, and lodged in jail. There he will remain until given trial in May.

Gosney's body is in the post hospital at Fort Washington. Commandant Coffin, of thearrison, is awaiting word from the soldier's relatives. It is said he has a mother and sister living near Chicago, and it is expected that they will have the remains sent to their home.

After his surrender to Sergeant of the Guard Fred Russell last evening, Wineberger had a talk with Commandant Coffin. It is understood that he expressed great sorrow for the shooting, but intimated that he used his revolver only when he thought his own life was in danger. He insists that he was being attacked by Gosney when he fired the two bullets which killed the latter. The testimony of several other witnesses seems to bear him out in this regard.

Gosney had served in the Seventeenth Company, Coast Artillery, for two years, and was stationed at Fort Washington, just beyond River View. Wineberger's service covered a period of thirty months. He was a member of the 10th Company, also quartered at Fort Washington. Saturday night the two principals in the tragedy and a number of other soldiers journeyed over to Walter Brown's saloon, at Hutton Hall four miles from Fort Washington.

Ill-Feeling Over a Girl.
A corporal, two privates, and a musician were in the room with Gosney and Wineberger at the time of the shooting, but all of them are kept silent by military discipline. Their stories of the tragedy will not be heard until the trial.

Ill-Feeling is said to have existed between Gosney and Wineberger for some weeks because of the former's association with a girl to whom Wineberger had been paying attention for months. Although the woman was not the direct cause of the shooting, her name was brought into the quarrel before Wineberger drew his pistol and killed his brother-in-law.

Shortly after their arrival at Brown's barroom music was heard in a room above the saloon and the soldiers went there immediately. The woman in the case was seated at a table and Gosney took a chair near her. After an hour's stay in the room Gosney is said to have become hostile and demonstrated toward the girl. Wineberger objected to the conduct of Gosney and after passing a few words with him descended to the bar, where he complained to the proprietor.

Brown and Wineberger are the best of friends and it is said the proprietor knew of the feeling existing between the former and Gosney.

The Proprietor Intercedes.
Going to the room Brown informed Gosney and the other soldiers that they were too disorderly and he preferred that they go to the bar.

Ignoring the remarks of the proprietor Gosney arose and walked to the steps, where he is said to have made some slighting remark about Wineberger. When the party reached the bar Gosney is alleged to have again made remarks to Wineberger.

"You had a lot of a lot to do, didn't you?" said Gosney. "Too noisy for you, eh? You ought to be in Sunday school. That's the place for you."

Wineberger is said to have looked toward the ceiling and whistled. This aroused Gosney's anger and he asked: "What the hell are you whistling about?"

"Because I want to," replied Wineberger. "Anybody here going to stop me?"

"I'll stop you if you're whistling at me, and I'll stop you if you're not," too," Gosney is said to have replied. "Before you do it I'll stop you from jiving drinks for that girl," replied Wineberger.

This remark is said to have infuriated Gosney. He asked, "Does that girl belong to you? Is she any of your business? That's what you got mad about upstairs, was it?"

Wineberger Fires Fatal Shot.
Witnesses say Gosney then lunged toward Wineberger, aiming a blow at his face. Wineberger side-stepped the blow. Gosney is said to have continued his rush toward Wineberger. The latter then drew his revolver.

Before any one could interfere, Wineberger discharged the weapon twice. The first bullet struck Gosney under the left arm, and is believed to have entered the side of his heart. Gosney reeled and fell into the arms of one of the privates standing near the bar.

Wineberger is reported to have fired another bullet which penetrated Gosney's abdomen, and he slid to the floor, bleeding and groaning. Wineberger then rushed out the door and disappeared in the woods.

Gosney was conscious for two hours. He knew he was mortally wounded, and between groans said, "This is my finish. I won't breathe much longer."

Says Stage Is the Guide To Fashions in America

Mary Boland, of "Strongheart" Company, at the National, Discusses Gowns.

MISS MARY BOLAND,
As She Appears With Robert Edeson in "Strongheart."

Miss Mary Boland, who, besides knowing how to wear gowns, designs them, is of the opinion that fashions in this country are largely guided by the artistic hats and gowns on the stage. As Dorothy Nelson, in Robert Edeson's company at the New National this week, Miss Boland has great opportunity for displaying her artistic taste, and she has some connections that have made even the eyes of the unfair gleam with admiration in many cities.

"I know of more than one gownmaker," she says, "who would not have a soldier might cross the river to the Virginia shore, and asked the Alexandria authorities to watch for him."

The Murderer Surrenders.
Haggard, footsore, hungry, and with his clothing sagged and tattered, Wineberger limped into Fort Washington about 5 o'clock last evening. He went immediately to the guardhouse in charge of Sergeant Russell and gave himself up. He was much affected when informed that Gosney died two hours after the shooting, and that the body was in the fort hospital.

Commandant Coffin ordered Wineberger put in irons and brought before him. The two were left together for an hour or more, during which time Wineberger told the commandant the history of the case and the circumstances leading to the shooting. Commandant Coffin then ordered him back to the guardhouse and ordered him held there until the arrival of the civil authorities.

TRY CONGRESSMAN ON MURDER CHARGE

Favrot, Who Shot Wife's
Slanderer, Will Claim
"Unwritten Law."

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 28.—After three months in prison, attended by his wife, who has remained true throughout, Congressman-elect George K. Favrot, who on November 7 shot and killed his college classmate and family physician, Dr. R. H. Aldrich, because the latter had made a disparaging remark about the wife of the Congressman, will go to trial for his life here in the next few days, or as soon as the special judge, H. F. Brumot, elected at a special election to succeed Congressman Favrot himself as judge of this district, receives his commission and qualifies.

Favrot held the offices of Congressman from the Sixth district and judge of East Baton Rouge Parish. The Congressional election had occurred the day preceding the killing, and five hours before Dr. Aldrich was shot down Judge Favrot passed the death sentence on a negro for murder. That night he was arraigned in his own court room.

By an oversight in the Louisiana constitution, there is no substitute for a district judge, and Congressman Favrot, being unable to grant himself bail, was remanded to prison, and there he has remained, and with him the entire court machinery of the district tied up because the law did not provide for such an emergency. The supreme court declared the only solution was a special election of a district judge, and this has been done.

Congressman Favrot will claim the "unwritten law." A woman's name was sullied and her protector put to death the man who was responsible. Fewer than half a dozen persons know the nature of the alleged insult.

Congressman Favrot will be defended by Judge Thomas J. Kernan, of Baton Rouge, whose views on the "unwritten law" were set forth in a paper read before the recent national convention of the American Bar Association at St. Paul. Judge Kernan then said:

"Any man who traduces a virtuous woman's character or chastity may be shot with impunity by her or her husband or any near relative. But the offender must first be given an opportunity to deny or disprove the charge, or to retract and apologize."

It will fall to Judge Kernan to establish that Aldrich was given this opportunity.

Telegraphing to Morton Van Gilder, of Maurice River, to come up to Leesburg and take charge of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad office, Charles E. Mason slung his double-barreled shotgun over his shoulder, and, going to a swamp a little way below, blew off his head.

Yesterday afternoon, in response to a telegram from Mason, Van Gilder arrived, and the agent gave him the keys. That was the last any one saw of Mason alive.

which is also employed in the elbow sleeves. Formed with three flounces, the edges of which are heavily embroidered in a design of wheat and poppies in silver, the skirt hangs gracefully to the tips of her dainty toes.

A feature is a grille of silver cloth fastened with magnificent brilliants. These are also used on the sleeves. Outlining the decollete bodice a strip of pale blue velvet lends a distinct tone to the garment. Its general beauty is further enhanced by being draped over pink chiffon.

"Being in the limelight," continued Miss Boland, "makes it imperative for every actress to dress herself most artistically, and this of course, is another point of advantage to a designing woman or one who comes to the matinee to see the fashions. In gown parlors, or ladies' tailor shops, draping of material is, of course, on dummy figures, and no matter how perfect the wax work, it cannot lend to a garment the life or vitality that draping on the human form does. The latter giving better occasion for judging the suitability or unsuitableness of a gown."

FIREMEN BURIED
BENEATH WALLS
IN BUFFALO FIRE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Fire of unknown origin broke out in the Seneca building, in Seneca street, at 5 o'clock this morning, and for more than three hours raged with unabated fury.

At 8:30 the weakened walls of the building collapsed, and it is believed a dozen firemen were buried in the ruins. Three men have already been taken out and Captain Haggerty and Firemen Elliott, Megan, and Dady are known to be still missing.

Early in the fire Lieutenant Muller slipped from a fire-escape and fell to the pavement, two stories, breaking a leg.

The men rescued at this writing are: Paul Yester, engine 8; Lucius Bearinger, engine 1; Patrick Sizemore, engine 3; Michael Buncie, engine 8; Lieutenant Borman, engine 8.

Pipefitter Hicks is reported dead, but his body has not been recovered. The Seneca building was occupied by the Phelps Chocolate Company, and the loss is estimated at half a million.

When Fireman Dady was taken out he told his rescuers that Fireman Elliott was by his side dead. Dady had shouted for help. He is thought to be fatally hurt.

Loss a Million

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 28.—The plant of the Phelps Publishing Company was destroyed by fire this morning.

The loss will reach $1,000,000; insurance $250,000.

The fire got away from the firemen because the streams of water froze as soon as they fell. The company published the Orange Judd Farmer, Good Housekeeping, Farm and Home and a score of other periodicals. The mailing list was saved, but practically all else was destroyed.

Chicago's Death Rate Highest in 14 Years

City Authorities Search
Trains and Confiscate
Half Carload of Cream.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—A midnight horse-back ride by representatives of the Chicago health department, a search of several carloads of milk, while they were being hurried into the city, and the confiscation of half a carload of cream—these were some of the incidents that entered into the city's fight against the sale of disease-breeding milk yesterday.

The day witnessed a marked decrease in both scarlet fever and diphtheria cases, as well as other contagious diseases.

JUSTIFIES OELRICHS' WHIPPING WAITER

New York Judge Says
Young Millionaire Did
the Proper Thing.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Magistrate Crane discharged Harry Oelrichs, the young millionaire, and congratulated him for whipping George S. Sloan, captain of the waiters at the Hotel Buckingham. In dismissing the charge of felonious assault, Magistrate Crane said:

"Any employee of a hotel calling a guest a vile name such as the defendant charges the plaintiff called him is enough to break up a hotel. I myself would go after a person who called me such a name. If I were called the name that the defendant alleges he was called, I would go after my insulter and kick him, no matter how big and powerful he was."

According to Sloan, who for more than a year has been in charge of the waiters at the Buckingham, and who is highly praised by the management, young Oelrichs kicked him during a row in the billiard room of the hotel, on the evening of January 12. He declared that he had been so seriously injured that his life was endangered.

JUDGE'S RELATIVE SHOT IN A DETROIT SALOON

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 28.—Albert Cameron, aged twenty-three, a brother-in-law of Judge William F. Connelly, of the recorder's court, was shot and instantly killed in a saloon at 1485 Russell street by Joseph Schulte, the bartender.

There had been ill feeling between the two men for some time, it is said. Cameron tonight, in a spirit of fun, began knocking the hats of people in the saloon down over their ears. Schulte ordered him to stop, and a quarrel ensued, which ended, it is said, by Schulte drawing a revolver and shooting Cameron through the heart.

There were reported during the day 125 new cases of scarlet fever, forty-one of diphtheria, nineteen of measles, and ten miscellaneous contagious cases. This is the smallest number of new cases since the first day of the epidemic.

DAKOTA DIVORCES AROUSE A BISHOP

Blaine-Pearsall Match Sends the Rev. Dr. Hare to Lobbying.

The divorce of Mrs. James G. Blaine, and her marriage to Lieut. Paul S. Pearsall, which followed so quickly, stirred up Bishop W. H. Hare, of the Episcopal diocese of Sioux Falls, S. D., to renewed activity against divorce.

The bishop is a fighter, and he is directing his efforts toward securing a strong anti-divorce lobby at the next session of the South Dakota Legislature, which convenes this spring. It was Bishop Hare who refused to accept a $1,000 memorial window which the Baroness de Steuers offered to give to his cathedral, because she had secured a divorce, and within an hour afterward, had again returned to the matrimonial lazarhouse with Count Zborowski. Both had been regular attendants at the bishop's cathedral, and were liberal contributors to the various organizations connected with the church.

Mrs. Astor's $20,000 Window.
Mrs. John Jacob Astor, the aunt of the baroness, had given $20,000 to the building fund of the cathedral and it was named St. Augusta's, in honor of her.

But the bishop was obdurate when he discovered that the Baroness Steuers was in Sioux Falls just to get a divorce, and he was greatly incensed at her prompt remarriage. His congregation thought he ought to temper his notions on such matters, but would have no tempering.

The Window's Finish.
The memorial widow of the baroness that was in the cathedral basement awaiting the time when it was to be placed in position, was handed forth and removed from the church property.

The bishop selects shining marks to set forth as examples in his arguments against the laxity of divorce conditions, and the divorce and remarriage of Mrs. James G. Blaine are cited by the bishop as a reason why South Dakota should have more stringent laws on the subject.

Through the courtesy of General Crozier, chief of ordnance, officers of the High School Cadet Corps and the separate battalion will be equipped with the new army saber in place of the straight sword, which has been in use up to this time.

"My three children had eczema for five months. A little sore would appear on the head and seemed very itchy, increasing day after day. The baby had had it about a week when the second boy took the disease and a few weeks developed, then the third boy took it. For the first three months I took them to the N. Dispensary and they told me that the children had ringworm, but they did not seem to improve. Then I heard of the Cuticura Remedies, and I thought I would write you about my case, and when I got the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment I bathed the children's heads with warm water and Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment. In a few weeks they had improved, and when their heads were well you could see nothing of the sores. I should be very glad to let others know about the great Cuticura Remedies.
